

Getting to know you

The Human Relations Department works to help people understand and respect each other and appreciate our differences. They try to ensure that all Greensboro residents are treated fairly no matter what their race, color, gender, religion, national origin, or disability may be.

There are many ways that people show they are prejudiced. Use the secret code to complete the sentence:

= a	% = i	+ = m	" = s
& = c	$ = j	! = n	; = t
@ = e	/ = k	? = o	~ = y
* = h	^ = l	: = p

People who are prejudiced may:

- 1) call others
! # + @ "
- 2) or others
* % ; / % & /
- 3) not let others
: ^ # ~
- 4) tell about others
+ @ # ! $? / @ "

Deciding to like or dislike people before you get to know them is called "prejudice."

Four black N.C. A&T students fought prejudice in 1960 when they sat down at an all-white lunch counter in Greensboro and waited for service.
